In person is the best way

In a recent online survey of over 2,000 singles, a whopping 85% polled that they would prefer to meet potential suitors face to face vs. an online encounter. Though online dating has its merits, 3 dimensional encounters are proven to be the most successful means to determine if someone is truly a good fit.

"Office romances can be quite fun in the beginning."

The subtle nuances of ones body language, personality, smell, touch-- these things cannot be communicated through an online profile. What's more is that there is no way to know if the person behind the profile is really who they say they are. If online dating is ruled out as an option to safely meet other singles, what are we left with as viable options? Sure, friends or family could set you up, but how awkward is it if the two of you don't jive? Too often, well-meaning friends and loved ones think they know someone who is "just perfect for you"...only to arrive to your blind date and realize from the get-go that things are just not right.

Problems can arise by having to see this person again at social gatherings and putting your loved one in an even more awkward position as the go between. Then there is dating someone from work. Office romances can be quite fun in the beginning, but reality sets in and before you know it, you're the hot topic at the water cooler and hiding behind your cubicle wall! Career life is complex enough without the added anxiety of facing your latest dating debacle Monday-Friday. What's left is trusting serendipity to bump into the mate of your dreams while at the gym, the grocery store, dry cleaners, etc. Chances are you are in your busy routine and go to the same places at the same times so the chances of encountering someone new are slim, much less having the courage to strike up a conversation!

Match of the Month

What Jason Says

"Veronica is the exact prototype of what I was looking for. I don't think I could have communicated to you what the perfect woman was, but somehow, you nailed it! We have so much in common! We are both passionate about snowboarding, hiking, and we even clicked on our favorite music and movies. She's driven, smart, and like I said, totally beautiful. We are going to Mammoth this weekend (our 5th date) and I am so exited about spending more time with her. Thanks a million for setting us up!"

What Veronica Says

"I am having so much fun with Jason. He is so thoughtful and I can tell that he is really taking the time to get to know me. We like doing the same things together. On our first date he took me on a hike and packed a picnic lunch afterward. He makes me laugh and I can't take myself too seriously around him. So refreshing! Also? He's a good kisser and he loves my dog. I can't believe I met him on my first Just for 2! I'll keep you posted...thanks again for your hard work and intuition!"

Matchmaker's Tip

"First impressions can make or break a first encounter. Take some time to prepare yourself by considering your appearance. It may seem shallow, but this is important. Spoil yourself by updating your wardrobe. Go shopping for some go-to date outfits so that you aren't snagged by the "what to wear" dilemma before your date. If you are unsure of what is appropriate and true to your personality, talk to a sales person and they will be happy to help! Ladies-wear things that make you feel flirty and attractive. If you do a double take or a shimmy in front of the mirror... it's a winner! Guys-jeans paired with a button down dress shirt and a sports coat is a great default date outfit. You can safely rule out sneakers, shorts, tank tops, and T-shirts."
